

Whitman Alumni Survey: 2020, 2022, 2023 Combined Report of One, Five, and Ten Years-Out Graduates

Current Primary Activity

Skills Enhanced by Whitman Education

Respondents were asked to rate the extent to which their Whitman education enhanced each of the skills listed below. Percentages represent the proportion marking "extremely effective" or "very effective."

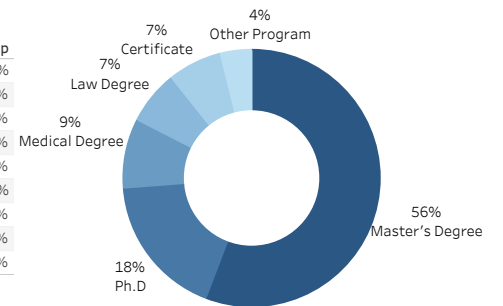

The "Gallup Big 6"

The Gallup-Purdue Index, through a study of 30,000 college graduates, identified six key elements of an undergraduate education that lead to graduates having a higher well-being and feeling more engaged in their work. Three of these relate to being supported at the institution (support statements) and the other three are about being active in campus experiences (experiential statements).

	Whitman	Gallup
Strongly Agree with all 6 statements	17%	3%
Strongly Agree with all 3 support statements	40%	14%
There was at least one faculty member who made me excited about learning	92%	63%
The faculty cared about me as a person	67%	27%
I had someone who I considered a mentor	48%	22%
Strongly Agree with all 3 experiential statements	26%	6%
I had a job or internship that allowed me to apply what I learned in class	33%	29%
I was active in one or more co-curricular activities or organizations	63%	20%
I worked on at least one project that took the semester or more to complete	75%	22%
